A SIU Memory and Aging Network Provider

Jeanne Holdren, APN-BC

NEW!

Although some changes in memory may occur with normal aging, memory and thinking problems that interfere with everyday life are not considered normal. Many causes of memory decline are treatable and sometimes reversible, an evaluation is necessary for accurate treatment. The earlier the diagnosis can be made, the better, as more treatment options may be possible.

If you, or a loved one, are suffering from the symptoms of memory loss or dementia, give us a call. We are here for you.
